It was at Furling, the big country house in Hampshire where I had come to convalesce after Loos, and Sandy, who was in the same case, was hunting for the marmalade. I flung him the flimsy with the blue strip pasted down on it, and he whistled. Hullo, Dick, youve got the battalion. Or maybe its a staff billet. Youll be a blighted brass-hat, coming it heavy over the hard-working regimental officer. And to think of the language youve wasted on brass-hats in your time! I sat and thought for a bit, for the name Bullivant carried me back eighteen months to the hot summer before the war. I had not seen the man since, though I had read about him in the papers. For more than a year I had been a busy battalion officer, with no other thought than to hammer a lot of raw stuff into good soldiers. I had succeeded pretty well, and there was no prouder man on earth than...
