J Hallam, chap. iv. sec. bcxviii. Ibid. loc. cit. I Ibid. chap. v. sec. xxii. NICHOLAS LEONICENUS. 273 polished by illiterate monks, and still more exceptionable pretenders; wherefore he inaugurated the course of the college, by instituting examinations for the purpose of testing the ability of those ecclesiastics whose degrees in theology conferred equal privileges in medicine; and, as a fit termination to his career, he endowed chairs of medicine at Oxford and Cambridge for the exposition of Hippocrates and Galen. Contemporary with Linacre, and co-operating in Italy to restore the medical literature of Greece from the imperfections of the Saracenic interpretations to its original spirit and literal meaning, Nicholas Leonicensus excelled our own countryman in advancing the practical application of his art and extending its resources to others. If we may credit the Biographie Universelle, he embraced...
