WE are still unable to state with certainty where Samuel Pepys was born, but Dr. Knights positive statement that Brampton was the place of his birth (vol. i. , p. xvii) gains no corroboration from the documents of the Merchant Taylors Company quoted on a previous page. If, as there stated, John Pepys was settled in London from his apprenticeship, and if he had no particular connection with Brampton until late in life, when his brother Robert left him his small property there, it seems highly improbable that his son should be born at that place. School. We only know from a casual reference that Pepys went to school first at Huntingdon, but the references to his attendance at St. Pauls School and to his schoolfellows there are numerous. In after life he always had a soft place in his heart for Dean Colets famous foundation. He presented books to the library, and gloried in its continued welfare. There is no view of the old schoolhouse where he was a pupil, which was destroyed in the Great Fire of London, but the plate on the opposite page shows the building that Pepys visited, and which was pulled down to make way for a new schoolhouse in 1823. This last building was destroyed in 1880, when the school was removed to West Kensington. The plate opposite is a reproduction of the pretty invitation card to Old Paulians to attend the school...
